About the conference

Workers' rights are governed through two processes: primary legislation – the law as agreed by parliament, and case law – the decisions and rulings made by the courts system, including employment tribunals.

Case law is of vital importance to workers' rights because it clarifies how Acts of Parliament are likely to be interpreted and implemented by judges, while in the case of judicial review it can even overturn the law altogether.

For example, while the political world has seen decades of legislation curtailing trade-union freedoms and the right to strike, a number of recent cases (including Kostal, 2021; Jiwanji 2022, and Ineos, 2022) have reasserted collective-bargaining rights, establishing that imposition of pay awards while collective bargaining is continuing is likely to be unlawful.

In 2023, the Agnew case removed significant barriers to claims by workers for unpaid wages and holiday pay in circumstances in which an employer has underpaid wages or holiday pay over a lengthy period.

And the 2023 Aslef and others case saw 13 unions win a judicial review against the government's decision to remove the ban on the use of agency workers to cover industrial action. In quashing regulations introduced by the Secretary of State for Business and Trade the High Court.

Join us at the NEU's London HQ as a team of barristers from Old Square Chambers guide us through significant cases relating to disability, religion and belief protections, victimisation, whistleblowing, holiday pay, protection from detriment on trade-union grounds and industrial action.

Who should attend

Trade unionists, employment lawyers working in support of trade unions, and academics and students with an interest in industrial relations and labour law.

How to get there

Train: Mabledon Place is off the south side of Euston Road, equidistant between Euston and St Pancras stations.

CPD accreditation

All IER seminars and conferences attract credit hours under the Law Society's Continuing Development Scheme and the General Council of the Bar's New Practitioners' Programme and Established Practitioners' Programme. Delegates requiring CPD points may be charged an additional administration fee of £10 to cover our costs.

Additional information

Name changes are accepted up until the time of the event. Delegates who advise IER of their cancellation more than 15 working days in advance will receive a credit note with 10% deduction for administration.
